Industry Intel

The search for prompt, cost-effective and high-quality medical services has driven the growth of urgent care centers (UCCs). Catering to a niche between traditional primary care providers and hospital emergency rooms, UCCs have increasingly become the go-to solution for non-emergent medical situations that require immediate attention.

Urgent care facilities have clearly established their place as an integral part of the health care system.

The U.S. has about 15,000 operational urgent care centers. Over half (54%) of urgent care operators own more than 10 locations.

The annual revenue for urgent care centers is $46.7 billion.

AMBULATORY SURGERY CENTERS (ASCs)

ASCs are facilities that provide same-day surgical care, presenting patients with an alternative to hospital-based procedures. They do not provide diagnostic or primary care.

Approximately 3,140 of the nation's ASCs are multi-specialty.

The migration of surgical care from hospitals to ASCs continues, driven by patient demand for convenience, lower costs and technological advancements that enable more procedures to be performed safely outside the hospital.

ASCs are increasingly performing higher-acuity cases, including total joint replacements, complex spine surgeries and cardiovascular procedures. In 2025, it's predicted that 33% of cardiac procedures will take place in ASCs, reflecting the sector's growing ability to safely manage complex cases in a cost-effective, outpatient setting.

Know the Customers

Target Customers

74% of Americans have gone to an urgent care or retail medicine clinic, and 72% have been treated at an ER. [Source: "Everyone Has A Family Doc, But Can You Get An Appointment?" healthday.com, 26 May 2026. Web. 5 Aug. 2026.]

Younger generations are increasingly using urgent care as their primary source of health care, reflecting dissatisfaction with traditional primary care models.

Parents frequently take children to urgent care for acute issues like cold, cough and flu, which are among the most common reasons for visits.

Urgent care appeals to a broad socioeconomic spectrum due to lower out-of-pocket costs compared to emergency departments and greater price transparency.

About 96% of urgent cares report treating people of all ages, and 4% of urgent cares specialize exclusively in pediatric care.

Target Customers by Mile Radius

Most customers are drawn from a 20 mile radius.

Nearly 89.4% of the U.S. population is within a 20-minute drive of an urgent care center. Population size is the major factor determining the number of urgent care centers in a given area, as the industry is very localized.

Top Factors People Consider When Choosing This Type Of Account

Urgent care centers offer advantages over primary care providers, such as not requiring an appointment and being open late and on weekends. The centers can be a point of entry into health care for millennials. Many millennials do not have a primary care physician, so they go to urgent care instead because they can show up without an appointment.?

Key factors driving the growth of UCCs include:

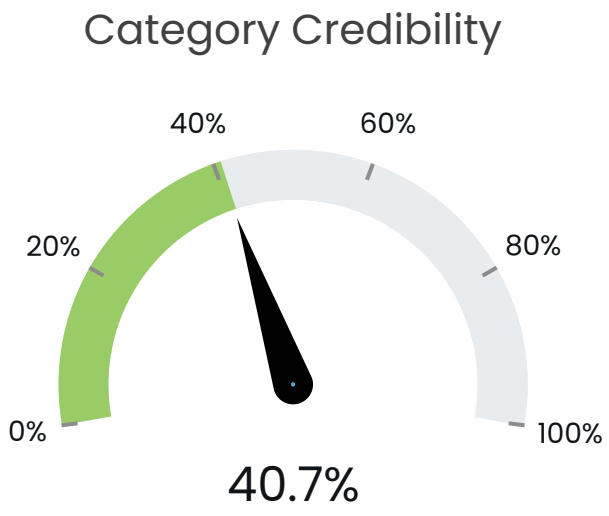

- Strain on hospital emergency departments
- The drive for patient-centric care
- The need for flexible health care options in terms of timing and affordability
- Technological advancements that support decentralized care

While many urgent care centers have at least one physician on staff, most also have a staff of trained physician assistants and nurse practitioners who are capable of diagnosing and prescribing treatment for a variety of health conditions.

Credibility - and whether a person has it or not - determines who you trust for guidance and information you use to make decisions in your everyday life. The four components of credibility for any human being are (1) being known, (2) being likable, (3) being helpful, and (4) being trustworthy. Credibility is gained (or lost) by what one says, how they say it, what they do and, finally, what others say about them. Having credibility also requires having others' best interests at heart.
