Regional and national banks together underpin the U.S. financial system, serving consumers and businesses through deposits, lending, and payments while maintaining strong capital positions. Through mid-2025, the top 20 U.S. banks held more than $250 billion in excess capital, reflecting a resilient balance sheet environment despite economic and rate volatility.

National banks dominate by asset size, led by JPMorgan Chase with $3.64 trillion in assets, followed by Bank of America at $2.62 trillion and Wells Fargo at $1.71 trillion, while large regional banks such as U.S. Bank at $659 billion and Regions Bank at $158 billion remain significant players. Regional banks differentiate through local market strength and targeted growth, including U.S. Bank's expanding California presence, Fifth Third's strong deposit share across the Great Lakes and Southeast, and BMO Harris's multistate footprint supported by AI-enabled services.

The industry remains fragmented, with more than 4,600 FDIC-insured institutions, creating opportunities for consolidation as merger and acquisition activity rebounds after muted deal volume in 2023 and 2024. Earnings momentum is supported by a steepening yield curve and the repricing of low-rate loans originated in 2020, driving expectations for double-digit earnings growth at many regional banks through 2026.

Financial performance remains solid. In the third quarter of 2025, insured U.S. banks reported aggregate net income of $79.3 billion. National banks continued to lead profitability, benefiting from higher asset sensitivity and a recovery in capital markets activity, with investment banking fees rising 43% year over year in the third quarter of 2025.

Risks are increasing but remain manageable. Credit stress has risen, with card and auto charge-offs rec 38% 13-year highs and financial crime activity accelerating, as banks filed 2.6 million suspicious activity repo fiscal year 2024. Regional banks face heightened commercial real estate exposure, with $957 billion in commercial real estate loans maturing in 2025, particularly for institutions concentrated in office properties.

Overall, valuations remain attractive, particularly for regional banks. Net income growth is supported by yield curve dynamics, improving loan demand, digital and fintech-driven expansion, and a rebound in merger and acquisition and initial public offering activity.

MOBILE/DIGITAL BANKING

U.S. consumers continue to prefer mobile banking above all other channels, with 54% of bank customers using mobile apps as their primary method for managing accounts, compared with 22% using online banking via laptop or PC, 9% visiting branches, 6% using ATMs, and 4% using telephone banking. Mobile banking adoption has more than doubled since 2017, when only 26% of consumers identified mobile apps as their preferred banking method.

Mobile banking dominates across generations, with 67% of millennials, 63% of Gen Zers, and 56% of Gen X reporting mobile apps as their most-used channel. For the first time in the survey's history, baby boomers now report mobile apps as their top banking method (38%), surpassing online banking via laptop or PC, which declined from 41% in 2024 to 35% in 2025. Branch usage skews older, as 12% of baby boomers say visiting a branch is their primary method, compared with only 3% of Gen Zers. Younger consumers show broader digital channel usage, with 10% of Gen Zers relying most on ATMs, 4% on telephone banking, and 3% on mail, while 11% use online banking via PC.

Consumer satisfaction with digital banking is extremely high, as 95% of respondents rate their bank's online and mobile app experience as excellent (38%), very good (37%), or good (20%), with only 5% rating it fair or poor. Overall access to banking services is also rated positively, with 96% of consumers describing their access as excellent (38%), very good (41%), or good (17%), and just 1% rating access as poor. Technology investments are widely viewed as improving financial inclusion, as 86% of consumers agree that innovation makes it easier for all Americans to access financial services, including 41% who strongly agree and 45% who somewhat agree.

Only 5% of respondents disagree that banking innovation improves access, while 9% report no opinion. [Source: "National Survey: Bank Customers Continue to Use Mobile Apps More Than Any Other Channel to Manage Their Accounts." ABA.com, 18 Nov. 2025. Web. 26 Dec. 2025.]

MARKETING OUTLOOK

Bank marketers continue to shift spending toward digital channels, with 83% planning to increase digital advertising, reinforcing a multi-year trend toward measurable, performance-driven media.

Search engine marketing and optimization remain a top priority, as 63% of banks plan to increase SEM/SEO spending, reflecting its strong ROI and direct impact on lead generation.

Social media remains a core growth channel, with 45% of respondents increasing social media investment, while 31% plan to grow email marketing budgets, particularly for retention and relationship deepening.

Traditional media plays a smaller but still relevant role, with 23% of bank marketers planning to increase direct mail spending, making it the most invested-in non-digital channel due to its measurability and attribution.

Digital media now represents more than 60% of the typical bank's media mix, and this share is expected to grow to 65–70% in 2026, aligning banks with broader advertising industry trends.

Search engine marketing and digital display advertising deliver the highest perceived ROI, followed closely by social media and email marketing, while direct mail and outdoor advertising perform best among traditional channels.

Compared with other industries, banks allocate less budget to video, as only 7% of bank marketers plan to increase TV spending, while other industries dedicate nearly 15% of total budgets to digital video.

New customer acquisition is the top business objective for marketing investment, followed by customer retention, which increasingly includes relationship deepening across digital channels.

Credibility - and whether a person has it or not - determines who you trust for guidance and information you use to make decisions in your everyday life. The four components of credibility for any human being are (1) being known, (2) being likable, (3) being helpful, and (4) being trustworthy. Credibility is gained (or lost) by what one says, how they say it, what they do and, finally, what others say about them. Having credibility also requires having others' best interests at heart.
