Industry Intel

The lodging industry is divided into the luxury, mid-range and budget segments. The bed and breakfast inn segment is also a competitor. Consumers typically stay at hotels and motels for several days while conducting business or enjoying leisure activities, such as vacations or family visits. There is also an extended-stay component to the market – hotels serving the needs of travelers who need accommodations for a month or more. Consumers may select overnight accommodations as a result of hotel location, pricing and amenities, such as conference facilities.

Hotel/motel operators bill clients for room rental, food and beverage services, parking, and in-room entertainment.

Branded chains compete with independent operators. Hotels/motels must also attract leisure travelers who might instead opt to stay with friends and family.

In all, the U.S. lodging industry includes 112,000 businesses that report revenue of $239 billion.

BOUTIQUE HOTELS

Boutique hotels are a category that includes small hotels, typically with 10 to 100 rooms, though the definition is very loose. Often, they are not like a traditional hotel when it comes to building design and decor. They also emphasize guest experience. Chains are not typically considered boutique hotels, though some large hotel companies are offering their own version of a boutique hotel that varies greatly from their standard offering.

These hotels number approximately 7,230 and report revenue of $34.8 billion.

[Source: "Boutique Hotels in the U.S." IBISWorld.com, Aug. 2024. Web. June 2025.]

PARK AND FLY

Many hotels offer "park and fly" packages, which include an overnight stay and parking for travelers for the duration of their trip. This package appeals to travelers because it helps save on costly airport parking and is convenient for early-morning flights. Packages often include shuttle transportation to and from the airport.

SHORT-TERM RENTALS

Short-term Rentals (STRs) are defined as a residential home unit or accessory building that can be rented out for a brief period, normally less than 30 days.

Another form of temporary lodging, made popular by businesses such as Airbnb, they provide a platform for hosts to post verified accommodations for travelers. These lodgings compete based on location, amenities, customer services, and price.

BED-AND-BREAKFASTS (B&Bs)

Bed and breakfast inns are usually small lodging establishments and are often operated from the owner's residence. They are typically located in tourist destinations and compete with larger inns or hotels.

The U.S. bed-and-breakfast inns industry consists of approximately 2,713 companies generating $2.0 billion in revenue in 2024. Bed-and-breakfast inns provide small-scale lodging with personalized service and home-cooked breakfasts, typically in unique settings such as historic homes, rural properties, coastal areas, or heritage towns. The category primarily serves leisure travelers, who account for 53.65% of stays in 2025, and appeals to guests seeking authentic, localized experiences over traditional chain hotels.

The market reached $2.0 billion in 2024, growing 10.3% annually over the past three years, with a five-year average growth rate of 9.1%. Growth is supported by rising domestic tourism, demand for experiential travel, and increasing preference for distinctive accommodations.

- Rural properties hold the largest share of the market at 42.98% in 2025 and are projected to grow at a 7.25% compound annual growth rate (CAGR), driven by demand for open spaces and farm-fresh dining.
- Boutique and heritage inns account for 31.62% of revenue share in 2025, leveraging curated architecture and local storytelling to attract experience-focused travelers.
- Farm-stay and agri-tourism properties represent the fastest-growing segment, expanding at a 9.22% CAGR as travelers seek food-origin experiences and rural charm.
- Coastal and island B&Bs command premium rates but face higher seasonality, while heritage-town locations benefit from consistent cultural tourism traffic.

Key industry trends include increasing demand for authentic and unique travel experiences, strong growth in online bookings, and rising interest in sustainable tourism. Work-cations are expanding at an 11.15% CAGR as remote workers seek properties with reliable internet and dedicated workspaces. Solo travel among Gen Z consumers is driving demand for communal spaces and social lodging environments. Overall, the industry is positioned for steady growth, supported by experiential travel preferences and continued strength in domestic leisure travel.

Top Advertising Media Used

TV ads, both on traditional linear channels and streaming platforms, can help drive demand during peak travel planning seasons. In Q4 2024, hotel TV ads saw an 18% year-over-year increase in engagement. Streaming allows for precise geographic targeting at the Designated Market Area (DMA) level, optimizing ROI by focusing spend where engagement is highest.

Platforms like TikTok, Instagram and YouTube Shorts have become crucial for direct bookings and real-time engagement. Hotels are leveraging interactive content, in-app bookings and AI-driven targeting to reach potential guests. Social commerce, where bookings happen directly within social apps, is also another way these businesses reach their customers.

Micro- and nano-influencers deliver strong ROI for hotels by reaching niche, highly engaged travel communities. Their authenticity and focused audiences often outperform larger influencers in driving bookings and brand awareness.

Virtual tours, AR/VR previews and short-form video content give potential guests a taste of the experience before booking, increasing engagement and conversion rates.

Know the Customers

Target Customers

The hotel/motel market is comprised of two major customer groups: Business travelers and leisure travelers. These businesses also target those who are hosting events like weddings and business meetings.

[Source: “2025 State of the Industry Report.” The American Hotel & Lodging Association. Ahla.com, n.d. Web. June 2025.]

Target Customers by Mile Radius

Most customers are drawn from a 150 mile radius.

Nearly half (49%) of travelers are driving less than 5 hours to reach their hotel or motel, which typically equates to a distance of roughly 150–300 miles, depending on traffic and speed. During the holiday season, over 119 million Americans travel more than 50 miles from home, indicating that significant portions of hotel and motel demand are driven by trips in the 50-to-300-mile range.
