THE CHALLENGE

A regional transportation company selected Adtaxi to help accomplish their goals of getting more app downloads with a limited budget at a low CPA.

KEY LEARNINGS | INSIGHTS

One major challenge in this campaign was finding the optimal balance between the Universal App and mobile search campaigns. Generating installs was the primary goal of the campaign, but the client was also interested in promoting their new app to people who already use their service. Since this transportation company is well known, we were able to take advantage of the high volume of branded traffic to keep CPCs low in our search campaign while simultaneously increasing the overall volume of installs.

Over the course of the engagement, we continued increasing our clicks and impressions MoM, but most importantly, we reduced our CPC and cost per install from $9.73 in February, to only $1.11 in May.

THE FULL STORY

Balancing app and search campaigns

Solution: Adtaxi leveraged a Universal app campaign to highlight the convenience of using this regional transportation company's new mobile ticketing app and reach new users across the many Google properties. Since this service appeals to many types of customers, we used simple calls to action to encourage users to download the app.

To supplement the app campaign, we added a mobile-only search campaign with an app extension to maintain more control over branded keyword costs and visibility. While the search campaign had a lower conversion rate, the cost per click was 1/5th the cost of the app campaign, allowing us to capture more branded traffic and still drive 20% of the total installs.

With the joint efforts of running an App campaign and the mobile-only search campaign, we were able to drive downloads at 1/15th of the goal cost while maintaining an extremely low CPC ($0.12).
